Most accounts of the modern world, or 'modernity', define it in relation to the processes of industrialization and democratization that were seen to occur in Western Europe and North America in the long nineteenth century. Such narratives rarely acknowledge other historical events and processes – such as colonization and enslavement and the resistance to these processes – as equally significant in the 'making of the modern world'.

Race and the Making of the Modern World "The silencing of the Haitian Revolution is only a chapter within a narrative of global domination" – Michel-Rolph Trouillot, Silencing the Past. The Haitian Revolution (1804) is one of the most important world-historical events, but it is likely that you have never heard of it even though it occurred around the same time as the French (1789) and US (1776) revolutions.

Race and the Making of the Modern World

The modern notion of the public intellectual is, however, fairly recent. It took shape in the tumultuous days of what has come to be known as the 'Dreyfus affair' in France in 1894.
